$5,800 Bond Is Awaited By Russian Spy Suspect

PORTLAND, Ore., March 28—Nicolai Gregorovich Redin, young Russian naval officer arrested here Tuesday night by the F. B. I. for alleged spying, faced a continued hearing today before U. S. Commissioner Robert Leedy and was expected to be released on $25,000 bail.

The swarthy, taciturn Soviet officer, still denying all charges, took his continued imprisonment in Portland's Rocky Butte Jail in calm stride. He rested last night seemingly without a worry as to the ultimate outcome of the case. He was visibly relieved, however, at the arrival of Russian Consul General Michael Vavilov from San Francisco yesterday afternoon.

It was expected that Vavilov would post bail for Redin and guarantee his appearance at further court proceedings in Seattle, where the F. B. I. charged he "induced another to obtain plans, documents and writings concerning the USS Yellowstone for the advantage of foreign power, to wit: the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

Commissioner Leedy said late last night that he expected bail to be posted for Redin. Vavilov had asked that Redin be freed without bond, stating it was the "usual diplomatic procedure in such cases," but Leedy was adamant.

The exact nature of what Redin was allegedly seeking concerning the Yellowstone has not been brought to light, but Seattle 13th Naval District officers and Navy Department spokesmen in Washington said emphatically that the American destroyer tender was in no way connected with the Atomic "Operations Crossroads," to be held this summer in the Marshall islands.

FOES OF DRAFT MUSTER FORCES

Norman Thomas, W. C. T. U. Representatives Head List Opposing Extension

WASHINGTON, March 28—Anti-draft organizations bombarded the Senate military affairs committee today as it opened hearings on whether to continue selective service.

Socialist Leader Norman Thomas, representatives of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and others asked to testify against extending the draft law, now scheduled to expire May 15. A committee spokesman said they would be heard.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey was called by the committee to present the first arguments for draft extension. Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, in charge of War Department personnel, was next.

The committee planned later appearances for Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Chester W. Nimitz. All favor extending the draft, as does Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

So numerous are opposition witnesses that they will be limited to 15 minutes each. The committee has agreed to vote April 9 on any draft extension. A continuation until at least July 1 seemed likely.

It seemed probable, meanwhile, that the House would not wait for the Senate to act. Speaker Sam Rayburn, D., Tex., said he hoped the House military affairs committee "will act right away." He said he would confer with committee chairman Andrew J. May, D., Ky., on his return to Washington today.

Iran Oil Trusteeship Urged

BRITAIN WANTS UNITED NATIONS PUT IN CHARGE

Idea Suggested Unofficially To Premier Ghavam More Than Month Ago

LONDON, March 28—The Foreign Office disclosed today that Britain had suggested to Iran that the future development of unallocated Iranian oil resources be placed under control of the United Nations.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the British ambassador to Tehran, Sir Reader Bullard, "unofficially" suggested to Premier Ahmed Ghavam of Iran that the country's oil development be turned over to the UN.

Basin Of New York Rumors
Bullard advanced the suggestion a month ago, the spokesman said. He said Bullard gave it as his "personal, unofficial opinion" that the future of Iran's unallocated resources might be discussed by the UN economic and social council.

Reports from New York that the UNO council might take over the allotment of Iranian Oil may have originated from the suggestion made by Bullard, the Foreign Office commentator said.

He said he did not know how Ghavam reacted to Bullard's idea. The spokesman said of Andrei Gromyko's walkout on the UNO security council:

"It is disappointing, but not alarming. It is a disturbing happening which placed the authority of the UNO in jeopardy."

Cabinet Studies Walkout
The British cabinet met to reconsider Britain's position in the Soviet-Iranian dispute in the light of Gromyko's walkout.

The cabinet meeting lasted two hours. The ministers were understood to have worked through a long list of topics, including the Iranian situation.

It was generally believed that Britain will sit tight on the firm position she has adopted, favoring security consideration of the substance of the Iranian dispute.

Informed quarters predicted that a complete withdrawal from Iran would lead to an amicable settlement. They said they believed that neither Britain nor the United States would challenge the Soviet right to share in Iranian oil development.

Autonomy No Barrier
The same sources expressed belief that the two powers would be willing to see a measure of autonomy granted to the Azerbaijan province.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was confident of his policy stand after the overwhelming approval he received in a meeting of the Parliamentary Labor party. There still were no indications that Bevin intended to go to New York.

The Daily Herald, Labor party organ, said Bevin told the labor party meeting that he wanted to assist Iran to implement its 1929 constitution "which gave independence to some outlying areas."

Radio Moscow and the Tass News Agency remained silent about Gromyko's action of yesterday. Apparently the Russian public was told nothing about the Wednesday session and the ambassador's walkout.

Excerpts from this morning's Russian newspapers broadcast by radio Moscow dealt entirely with Tuesday's session.

GOP THREATENS HANNEGAN QUIZ

Lobby Inquiry Brings Demand For Probe Of New Deal Legislative Methods

WASHINGTON, March 28—House Republicans threatened today to throw the spotlight on administration methods of pushing legislation if Congress sets up a committee to investigate private lobbyists.

The House Rules committee yesterday okayed a resolution giving itself broad authority to investigate lobbies operating on Capitol Hill.

It will be ready for House action as soon as amendments, also approved yesterday, can be written into the bill.

The Republicans said they saw no difference between the activities of private lobbyists—currently under fire from congressional administration leaders—and those, for instance, of Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan. In either case they said, it was an attempt to influence Congress.

They claimed that Hannegan at one time even warned Democratic members of Congress they would be "written out of the party" if they didn't support the administration's emergency veteran's housing program.

The GOP threat to inject Hannegan and other top-flight Democrats into the picture may bring efforts to sidetrack the investigation. The rules committee, however, might be difficult to persuade.

Reuther "Man To Watch" In U. S. Labor Movement

DETROIT, March 28—Walter P. Reuther, pint-sized, energetic, red-haired, tireless new president of the CIO's United Automobile workers, was regarded as the man to watch in the U. S. Labor movement.

Officials of the big unions, including the CIO, were surprised by the victory of the fast-talking Reuther over affable, tobacco-chewing R. J. Thomas in yesterday's UAW election at Atlantic City. Reuther won by a scant 125 votes.

Murray Is Cool
CIO President Philip Murray, who was cool to Reuther during the election campaign, declined immediate comment. But there was considerable belief here that Reuther has a bright future in the CIO, possibly even as Murray's eventual successor.

Manufacturers waited today for the impact of Reuther's immediately announced over-all policy—an annual wage, equal pay for equal work, and wage agreements based on ability to pay. Reuther, humble born and college trained, believes in action.

He was born Sept. 1907, the son of a labor leader, and was coddled, reared and educated with the smoke of American industry in his nostrils.

Father An Organizer
His father was an organizer for a brewery union in Wheeling, W. Va., in the heart of the steel and mining country. Reuther was a boy who couldn't sit still. Wiggle-bitches, his neighbors called him.

At 15, he quit high school to become an apprentice tool and die maker for the Wheeling Steel Corporation—and was fired for his attempts to organize the workers against Sunday and holiday work.

Reuther came to Detroit, then struggling to become the automotive center of the world. He resumed his tool and die apprenticeship and worked in several shops before getting a job with the Ford Motor Company.

Rise Is Rapid
In six years he demonstrated that he was a leader, and was made foreman in a tool and die room, with 40 men under him. He believed in unionism and intelligent leadership.

The young man asked for night work so he could continue his education. (Continued on Page Two)

Government officials indicated, without explanation, that they were still hopeful for a favorable break in today's negotiating session. It was understood the Labor Department would offer a settlement formula if the deadlock was not broken by Saturday.

There has been no apparent progress in the negotiations since Monday when UMW President John L. Lewis rejected contract proposals submitted by the operators.

BLACK MARKETS BLAMED ON OPA

Meat Packers Say Production Is Only Way To Beat Inflation Threat

WASHINGTON, March 28—The American Meat Institute today accused OPA of "creating" a black market in meat which it said was costing Americans more than $1,250,000,000 a year.

James H. McCall, institute board chairman, told the House agriculture committee that the black market plus government subsidies was costing consumers over $2,000,000,000 a year more for meat than retail ceiling prices would indicate.

Full Production Urged
"Full legitimate production is the only answer to both the inflation and black market problems," he said. "The only remedy is removal of price controls from the livestock and meat industry."

McCall led off a parade of meat packing industry representatives invited by the committee to give their views on the meat situation. The institute claims more than 500 members in all parts of the country, including small, medium and large packers.

Meanwhile, OPA in a new jab at the black market clamped strict controls on custom slaughtering operations. This is the practice by which the owner of an animal has another person kill and dress the carcass for a service charge.

Hereafter no one will be permitted to sell beef or veal from custom slaughter. (Continued on Page Two)

Axis Sally Is Identified As Former Co-Ed At OWU

DELAWARE, O., March 28—Ohio Wesleyan University officials at Delaware revealed today that Berlin's "Axis Sally" formerly attended the school as Mildred Gillars and was "a completely undisciplined individual and noticeably eccentric."

Axis Sally was arrested recently and will be tried on a treason charge in Berlin.

COAL DEADLOCK STILL UNBROKEN

Hopes Of Averting Walkout Wane, But Conciliators Retain Hope

WASHINGTON, March 28—The Labor Department clung to a slender hope today for an abrupt change in the trend of the deadlocked soft coal wage negotiations.

Barring a sudden development today, there appeared no possibility that the scheduled nationwide mine strike next Monday could be averted by direct bargaining between the United Mine Workers and the soft coal operators.

Government officials indicated, without explanation, that they were still hopeful for a favorable break in today's negotiating session. It was understood the Labor Department would offer a settlement formula if the deadlock was not broken by Saturday.

There has been no apparent progress in the negotiations since Monday when UMW President John L. Lewis rejected contract proposals submitted by the operators.

Some of the operators figured the next move was up to Lewis, but the union seemed to be holding back waiting for a more liberal offer. Government officials thought such an offer might be in the works.

of Mildred Gillars in the newspapers. Conger said Axis Sally attended the university from 1918 to 1922 but failed to obtain a degree.

Three Columbus classmates described Sally as "beautiful but eccentric."

Conger added that Sally had "very low academic grades" even though she had a "great deal of ability."

The registrar said her age was 46. Sally told Berlin authorities she was 37.

REDS BOYCOTT COUNCIL OVER IRANIAN PROBE

Big Five Unity Shattered; Delegates Ask, "What Do We Do Next?"

SECRET SESSION CALLED

Ala Bares Russian Demands On His Government, Denies Pact

NEW YORK, March 28—The United Nations security council took its crisis over Russia's walkout behind closed doors today, with the possibility that restoration of Big Five unanimity may require a direct appeal to Generalissimo Joseph Stalin.

The council—with or without Russia—will meet late today in secret session for a bitter, free-for-all battle over ways to get the Soviet representative back to the council table.

Appeal To Stalin Seen
When Big Five unanimity has been shattered in the past by Soviet policy, the United States has often appealed directly to Stalin.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes has been in direct telephonic communication with the White House ever since Russia walked out on the council late yesterday.

Other UNO delegates were dispatching urgent cables to their government's asking, "What do we do next?"

Soviet Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko, who stalked from the council chamber yesterday when his request for postponement of the Iranian case was denied, apparently was doing the same. He worked at the Soviet consulate office until 2 a.m.

Gromyko Says Nothing
When he left for his hotel, he told reporters: "I have nothing to say. If I had plans I would not tell you. I am going to bed."

UNO delegates, without discounting the serious impact of Gromyko's action yesterday on the future of UNO and public confidence in UNO, emphasized that Gromyko's walkout was entirely different from those by Germany, Italy and Japan from the League in the 1930's. Gromyko is refusing only to attend any council meetings before April 10 which discuss the Iranian case.

There was uncertainty whether Gromyko would attend today's secret session. But if he is assured that the merits of Iran's charges are not to be discussed, he could attend under his instructions. He told the council he would boycott any meeting before April 10 which considered the Iranian case.

Soviet To Be Represented
A Soviet representative, Fedor Orekhov, intends to attend today's meeting of the council's committee of experts on rules of procedure.

Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala, however, will not be invited to the executive session of the council. After waiting through two dramatic, history-making days of debate, Ala was allowed to tell the council and the world his story about Russian demands on Iran after Gromyko had stalked out of the council chamber.

Ala revealed for the first time the "demands" Soviet Russia made on Iranian Premier Ahmad Ghavam in Moscow in February: 1) To retain Soviet troops in some parts (Continued on Page Two)

Cable communication between New York and Montreal was disrupted.

Teletype communication was spotty between New York City and New Jersey and New York state points. The current went as high as 150 volts on the circuits normally operating at 110 volts.

REDS BOYCOTT COUNCIL OVER IRANIAN PROBE

Big Five Unity Shattered; Delegates Ask, "What Do We Do Next?"

of Iran indefinitely; 2) to grant Azerbaijan province autonomy; 3) to form a Soviet-Iranian oil company with Russia holding 51 per cent of the stock.

In return for the oil company Russia was to give up its earlier demands for an oil concession.

Pact Is Denied
Ala directly contradicted the Soviet Union's contention that an understanding or agreement had been reached—even on major points. He said he personally had no knowledge of any "positive results."

Most delegates commented cautiously on the critical situation in which the fledgling UNO finds itself three days after coming to the new world. But there was enough comment to reveal that all is not harmony even among the nine of the 11 nations which stood firmly against Russia on the Iranian question when the showdown came.

Russia's sole supporter on the council—Polish Ambassador Oscar Lange—gave a hint of the bitterness behind Russia's spectacular move.

Big Powers Blamed
He told a United Press correspondent after Russia's bolt: "Those who maneuvered to get Russia out of the council can now start worrying about how to get her back. The big powers who edged Russia out will now have to carry the responsibility."

Australia voted with the United States against Russia's motion to postpone the Iranian issue until April 10. But Australian delegate Col. W. R. Hodgson tried desperately to edge the council toward a compromise which might have prevented the Russian walk-out.

Hodgson is expected to play a major role in efforts to seal the breach. And he will speak bluntly about where he thinks the blame for UNO's crisis lies.

Clumsiness Charged
A spokesman for Hodgson said he could be quoted as having said: "There has been some clumsy handling of the whole situation and the Russian withdrawal could have been avoided."

Bewilderment was the reaction of most delegates, however. French Delegate Henri Bonnet was typical when asked what the council would do.

"I don't think anyone knows," he said. "We shall meet but I don't know. I just don't know. I tell you the truth, I just don't know."

It was Bonnet who tried in advance of yesterday's meeting to act as peacemaker between Gromyko and Byrnes. In his Pierre Hotel suite—over sherry and little cakes—Gromyko and Byrnes argued in what were reported as angry tones and finally agreed to face a showdown in the council.

Cadogan Less Concerned
British Delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan seemed less concerned than some of the other delegates. He told reporters he was "very pleased" that the Iranian was to tell the council as much as he did about the Soviet demands.

Those who witnessed yesterday's spectacular council session will not soon forget it. None who know the Russians ever felt that Gromyko was bluffing when he made his threat to walk out if the council denied his request.

But nonetheless, when it actually happened, it was a shock. Until the action took place there was always hope that some way out of the dilemma would be found. But it wasn't, and shortly after five o'clock those in the council chamber watched the young, poker-faced Gromyko gather up his papers and walk stiffly out of the council chamber with his aides after a short statement which ended:

"I therefore leave the meeting." Future Appears Ominous
Irrespective of the reasons behind the Russian move, that statement and Gromyko's departure was an ominous sign for the future of the UNO. It was a clear out example of Russia's belief that the big powers must have their way and her willingness to take extreme action to prevent being thwarted even by a majority of the council.

Gromyko's walkout created the test which Byrnes has felt for more than two weeks must be made on the Iranian case. The issue as finally drawn was whether Iran, having complained against Russian policy in her territory, should be allowed an immediate hearing.

The Russians, contending there was a Soviet-Iranian "understanding," demanded postponement until April 10. Byrnes demanded that Iran must have a chance to tell her version of last month's negotiations with Russia before the council decided on a postponement.

Neither Byrnes nor Gromyko would compromise—and neither did. The blowup came; the Big Five cracked wide open.

tom slaughtered animals unless his animals had been slaughtered at the same plant under the quota system prior to Dec. 29, 1945, and unless the plant has been certified by the Agriculture Department.

Legal Buyers Frozen Out
OPA said there recently had been a large increase in new cattle buyers who "through ignorance or without regard for ceilings" have been forcing up cattle prices until legitimate buyers cannot meet them and still comply with price regulations.

McCall told the Agriculture Committee that later witnesses would include representatives of independent market research organizations whose studies show that "the black market in meat is general from coast to coast and from border to border."

He said some studies showed that "from 80 to 95 per cent" of all retail stores surveyed sold meat at above ceiling prices. In some cases, he said, illegal prices were nearly three times the ceilings while double prices were quite frequent.

Liquor Racket "Petty"
"The liquor racket of the twenties was petty crime compared to the meat racket under OPA," he said.

McCall contended that the black market in meat was made possible by "the price control act, its faulty administration and the absence of price administration's almost futile efforts to enforce the act or its regulations."

Packers, he said, have been kept in a price "squeeze" since the very start of price control. Now, he added, their "very existence" is threatened by "a wasteful, scandalous, widespread and flagrant black market."

Slaughterers Curtail
"A large proportion of cattle is purchased in excess of maximum stabilization prices by black market slaughterers," McCall told the committee, "making it impossible for legitimate slaughterers to purchase even minimum requirements and remain in compliance with the stabilization range. This compels slaughterers to curtail drastically, or discontinue, their beef operations."

"A most serious situation is also developing in the hog market and pork business, and unless the causes thereof be promptly removed, an increasingly large percentage of the pork business also will be in the black market."

WILKES ADMITS CHECK FORGERY; HELD FOR JURY

Henry Wilkes, 23, of 147 Logan street, pleaded guilty to forgery, Wednesday night, in the court of Mayor Ben H. Gordon. Wilkes was ordered held for action of the Pickaway County grand jury and was jailed in default of $500 bond.

While free under $500 bond on another forgery charge Wilkes was arrested Monday by Patrolman Elmer Merriman on a warrant filed by William F. C. OF C. BLASTS 'HOKUM' IN U. S. INFLATION FIGHT

Policies Really Cause Jumps In Wages And Prices, Chamber Charges

WASHINGTON, March 28—The United States Chamber of Commerce today accused the Truman administration of practicing peace time economic hokum bordering on the irresponsible.

It charged that wage inflation and currency inflation policies already had caused the country irretrievable damage and, if continued, would lead toward more and more economic chaos.

Wallace Also Hit
In a bitterly worded statement adopted by the chamber's board of directors and aimed, in part at Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, it was proposed that:

1. Commodity price controls gradually be abandoned and be ended by Oct. 31, 1946.

2. Adjusted rent controls be extended, but not beyond March 31, 1947.

3. All wartime production and price-control subsidies be eliminated within the next six months.

4. Government costs be reduced to enable an over-balance of the budget.

U. S. Policy Assailed
The chamber's statement argued that administration policy was creating conditions of wage and currency inflation in the guise of preventing them. The directors accepted the inevitability of nationwide wage increases of 18 to 20 per cent. They argued that commodity prices should be freed to follow that trend if supply and demand required it.

Their statement cited a report prepared in the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion and another made public by Wallace last October.

In its report, OWMR argued that wages generally could be increased 24 per cent without price increases. The Wallace report was limited to the automobile industry on the eve of the General Motors strike. It argued that industry could raise wages 25 per cent without making car prices higher to the public.

Report Repudiated
Wallace this month repudiated that report, but after the General Motors strikers had struck and obtained a wage hike. The Chamber implied that both reports purposely were made public to support union demands. It said some of the OWMR economists who wrote that agency's report were advisers to the General Motors fact-finding board which recommended wage increases of 19 1/2 cents an hour. General Motors ultimately accepted 18 1/2 cents.

The Chamber statement recalled that the OWMR report never was officially published or released but was deliberately permitted to leak to the press.

"After some heated sessions with non-government economists" the statement continued, "the government themselves decided the document was too vulnerable to permit its publication. But the damage was done. Labor unions quoted it extensively and are still quoting it to prove that the indicated wage increases could be made without price increases."

Reuther "Man To Watch" In U. S. Labor Movement

He finished his two years of high school, and three years of college.

The crisis in unionization of the automobile industry was approaching. Reuther was fired in the fall of 1932 for his organization work in the Ford plant.

He wanted a fresh outlook. With his brother, Victor, also a labor leader, he set out for a three-year look-see around the world.

Helped Organize UAW Local

He returned in 1935 and entered the fight on Detroit's west side. He helped organize and was elected president of the United Auto Workers Local 174. He plunged into active organization of numerous striking companies. He took part in every major automotive "action" in that period of labor-management head-bumping.

He twice was beaten physically in the organization of the Ford Company's River Rouge plant, but he kept up his fight for what he thought was right. For his Ford organizational work, he was given the job as director of the General Motors division of the UAW-CIO. He became a vice president.

During the recent General Motors strike, he refused to accept his union salary when the strikers stopped receiving their pay checks. He was in their ranks daily, walking with the men in picket lines, asking their opinion, giving them advice.

Leadership Criticized
Reuther was criticized for his handling of the long General Motors strike. But the rank and file rallied behind him to wrest the union presidency from Thomas, despite an attempt by Communist factions to head him off.

Although defeated for president, Thomas still can be elected a union vice-president. That would exactly reverse the previous situation since Reuther was a vice-president when he led the UAW's strike against General Motors.

Reuther also was opposed by union secretary-treasurer George Addes, Richard T. Frankenstein, another UAW vice-president, and Richard Leonard, head of the UAW's Ford division.

Opposes Communism
In outlining his program, Reuther promised to seek mass production of housing, higher wages and lower prices, an annual wage in the auto industry and a clean-

Funeral services for Harry E. Whitlatch, 51, brother of Mrs. Roy Teegarden, Duvall, who died Wednesday in his home at Columbus, will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday in the Arthur H. Mader funeral home at Columbus. Burial will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery, Columbus. Friends may call at the funeral home.

Mr. Whitlatch, who was a telephone engineer for the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. for 25 years, had been ill about one year. He was a native of Chillicothe and was a World War I veteran. Survivors include his widow, Helen; two daughters, two sons, another sister, and two brothers.

$1,125,000 SUIT FILED AGAINST SINGER BY OPA

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 28—The Office of Price Administration today filed suit for $1,125,000 against the Singer Sewing Machine Co., alleging a nationwide investigation had revealed the company was selling used machines as new ones in violation of ceiling regulations.

tom slaughtered animals unless his animals had been slaughtered at the same plant under the quota system prior to Dec. 29, 1945, and unless the plant has been certified by the Agriculture Department.

Legal Buyers Frozen Out
OPA said there recently had been a large increase in new cattle buyers who "through ignorance or of without regard for ceilings" have been forcing up cattle prices until legitimate buyers cannot meet them and still comply with price regulations.

McCall told the Agriculture Committee that later witnesses would include representatives of independent market research organizations whose studies show that "the black market in meat is general from coast to coast and from border to border."

He said some studies showed that "from 80 to 95 per cent" of all retail stores surveyed sold meat at above ceiling prices. In some cases, he said, illegal prices were nearly three times the ceilings while double prices were quite frequent.

Liquor Racket "Petty"
"The liquor racket of the twenties was petty crime compared to the meat racket under OPA," he said.

McCall contended that the black market in meat was made possible by "the price control act, its faulty administration and the office of price administration's almost futile efforts to enforce the act or its regulations."

Packers, he said, have been kept in a price "squeeze" since the very start of price control. Now, he added, their "very existence" is threatened by "a wasteful, scandalous, widespread and flagrant black market."

Slaughterers Curtail
A large proportion of cattle is purchased in excess of maximum stabilization prices by black market slaughterers," McCall told the committee, "making it impossible for legitimate slaughterers to purchase even minimum requirements and remain in compliance with the stabilization range. This compels slaughterers to curtail drastically, or discontinue, their beef operations."

"A most serious situation is also developing in the hog market and pork business, and unless the causes thereof be promptly removed, an increasingly large percentage of the pork business also will be in the black market."

WILKES ADMITS CHECK FORGERY; HELD FOR JURY

Henry Wilkes, 23, of 147 Logan street, pleaded guilty to forgery, Wednesday night, in the court of Mayor Ben H. Gordon. Wilkes was ordered held for action of the Pickaway County grand jury and was jailed in default of $500 bond.

While free under $500 bond on another forgery charge Wilkes was arrested Monday by Patrolman Elmer Merriman on a warrant filed by William F. Davis, filling station operator at Water and Court streets. Davis claims that Wilkes passed a $10 check bearing the forged signature of his father, William Wilkes.

C. OF C. BLASTS 'HOKUM' IN U. S. INFLATION FIGHT

Policies Really Cause Jumps In Wages And Prices, Chamber Charges

WASHINGTON, March 28—The United States Chamber of Commerce today accused the Truman administration of practicing peace time economic hokum bordering on the irresponsible.

It charged that wage inflation and currency inflation policies already had caused the country irretrievable damage and, if continued, would lead toward more and more economic chaos.

Wallace Also Hit
In a bitterly worded statement adopted by the chamber's board of directors and aimed in part at Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, it was proposed that:

1. Commodity price controls gradually be abandoned and be ended by Oct. 31, 1946.

2. Adjusted rent controls be extended, but not beyond March 31, 1947.

3. All wartime production and price-control subsidies be eliminated within the next six months.

4. Government costs be reduced to enable an over-balance of the budget.

U. S. Policy Assailed
The chamber's statement argued that administration policy was creating conditions of wage and currency inflation in the guise of preventing them. The directors accepted the inevitability of nationwide wage increases of 18 to 20 per cent. They argued that commodity prices should be freed to follow that trend if supply and demand required it.

Their statement cited a report prepared in the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion and another made public by Wallace last October.

In its report, OWMR argued that wages generally could be increased 24 per cent without price increases. The Wallace report was limited to the automobile industry on the eve of the General Motors strike. It argued that industry could raise wages 25 per cent without making car prices higher to the public.

Report Repudiated
Wallace this month repudiated that report, but after the General Motors strikers had struck and obtained a wage hike. The chamber implied that both reports purposely were made public to support union demands. It said some of the OWMR economists who wrote that agency's report were advisers to the General Motors fact-finding board which recommended wage increases of 19½ cents an hour. General Motors ultimately accepted 18½ cents.

The chamber statement recalled that the OWMR report never was officially published or released but was deliberately permitted to leak to the press.

"After some heated sessions with non-government economists" the statement continued, "the government themselves decided the document was too vulnerable to permit its publication. But the damage was done. Labor unions quoted it extensively and are still quoting it to prove that the indicated wage increases could be made without price increases."

Reuther "Man To Watch" In U. S. Labor Movement

He finished his two years of high school, and three years of college.

The crisis in unionization of the automobile industry was approaching. Reuther was fired in the fall of 1932 for his organization work in the Ford plant.

He wanted a fresh outlook. With his brother, Victor, also a labor leader, he set out for a three-year look-see around the world.

Helped Organize UAW Local
He returned in 1935 and entered the fight on Detroit's west side. He helped organize and was elected president of the United Auto Workers Local 174. He plunged into active organization of numerous striking companies. He took part in every major automotive "action" in that period of labor-management head-bumping.

He twice was beaten physically in the organization of the Ford Company's River Rouge plant, but he kept up his fight for what he thought was right. For his Ford organizational work, he was given the job as director of the General Motors division of the UAW-CIO. He became a vice president.

During the recent General Motors strike, he refused to accept his union salary when the strikers stopped receiving their pay checks. He was in their ranks daily, walking with the men in picket lines, asking their opinion, giving them advice.

Leadership Criticized
Reuther was criticized for his handling of the long General Motors strike. But the rank and file rallied behind him to wrest the union presidency from Thomas, despite an attempt by Communist factions to head him off.

Although defeated for president, Thomas still can be elected a union vice-president. That would exactly reverse the previous situation since Reuther was a vice-president when he led the UAW's strike against General Motors.

Reuther also was opposed by union secretary-treasurer George Addes, Richard T. Frankenstein, another UAW vice-president, and Richard Leonard, head of the UAW's Ford division.

Opposes Communism
In outlining his program, Reuther promised to seek mass production of housing, higher wages and lower prices, an annual wage in the auto industry and a clean-

PARALYZED VET IS HAPPILY WED TO BRITISH GIRL

"Luckiest Man In World," He Says As Couple Begins Wheelchair Honeymoon

CHICAGO, March 28—Sgt. George Nason said today he was the luckiest man in the world, despite a paralyzing battle wound from which he never may recover. Nason, 32-year-old Menominee, Mich., veteran, is paralyzed from the waist down, but he was happy because he was married today to a blue-eyed blonde English girl he met during a London blackout.

Confined To Chair

"I guess I'm the luckiest man in the world," Nason said. He was sitting in the wheelchair to which he will be confined for at least two more years.

Barbara Reeve, 24, said she was lucky, too. She said she would not let anything stand in the way of their happiness.

For Nason the wedding is the happy climax to many bitter months. He fell in love with Miss Reeve after the blackout meeting, but was convinced that everything ended when he was shot down in Luxembourg.

She did not agree, and when he finally proposed, she immediately got aboard the first Chicago-bound airplane.

Pals Not Forgotten

In his good fortune, Nason has not forgotten his pals, the 40 men confined with him to ward six of the Army's Vaughan General Hospital. All of them, like Nason, are paralyzed from the waist down.

T/3 Clyde Lucas, of Detroit, was best man. The wedding was held in the hospital chapel, but Nason and Miss Reeve insisted that the reception be held in Ward Six.

Gifts poured in. Cook County Clerk Michael Flynn refused to accept a fee for the wedding license. A cake was sent anonymously. The Chicago Civic Opera offered a soloist. Several persons living near the hospital offered the bride a room so she could be with Nason as much as possible.

"Everybody has been wonderful to us," Miss Reeve said. "But we want to find a home of our own and lead our own lives as soon as George is well."

Families Not Present

The family of neither the bride nor the groom attended the wedding. She has no relations in this country. His parents were unable to make the trip because of illness.

Capt. Madison Thomas, Battle Creek, Mich., ward officer of Ward Six, volunteered to give the bride away. And the Red Cross, which yesterday cut through red tape to get a license without the customary delay, provided a maid of honor—Miss Dawn Newburger, Chicago.

Chaplain Jans J. Vander Graff performed the ceremony.

The bride's blue eyes sparkled. "Yes, we're going to have a real honeymoon," she said. "The doctors said George could spend three days in a Chicago Hotel."

UNO? Hic! Sure I Know, It's New Peace Cocktail

NEW YORK, March 28—It had to happen, and it has. Bartender Moe Green, now holding forth at the basement bar at Hunter College in the Bronx, has invented the UNO cocktail.

"It's a beaut," Green said today. "It'll make sour tempers sweet, and weak spines strong. It'll even make folks like each other better, and will have 'em all talking the same language—if they can still talk."

Moe, who has been a bartender for 20 years, said the new cocktail would contain vodka (if he can get it) French vermouth, Swedish punch, and a dash of orange bitters. "At the end, unless I miss my guess," he said, "they'll also need a glass of good American water."

Green, whose clients always call him "Slim" after the third drink, said that the new concoction would retail for 65 cents and that he probably wouldn't sell more than one to a customer—unless they rushed in looking as if they desperately needed a drink.

"In that case, they can have as many as they can handle," he explained. "After all, we want to keep everybody happy."

You might as well stay home... enjoy your friends and family.

From where I sit, that's a pretty common trait in human nature.

Take that glass of beer, for instance. During Prohibition, Ben was nursing an insatiable thirst. But come repeal, Ben suddenly finds he's happy with a friendly, moderate glass of beer—and nothing more. Yep—just tell folks the sky's the limit, and they'll settle for a piece of friendly earth.

BIRTHDAY BINGE IS COSTLY ITEM TO ENGLISHMAN

London Prices Are Fantastic; Food, Taxis And Liquor All Come High

By Joan Twelftree
LONDON, March 28—A boy friend asked me to accompany him on a tour of the high spots last night—and it turned out to be the $64 question.

That's about what it costs the average Englishman in the middle income bracket to see a show, wine, dine and dance in these days of fantastic prices.

Pays To Stay Home
Unless the costs come down, an Englishman's home is not only going to be his castle—it's going to be his constant hideout.

This boy friend, Johnny, earns about $50 a week, which approximates the present pay of a member of parliament. It was his birthday—so he started things off by sending me a corsage. That set him back about $5.

After he arrived in a taxicab, I vetoed the idea of attending an early movie at $2.32 per. We had afternoon tea instead.

Quickies Come Dear
Two "quick ones" before show-time cost Johnny $1.50 each—and they were a weak mixture of bad gin and ersatz vermouth. We had two more during intermission—small "quick ones" at 50 cents each.

Restaurants are not permitted to charge more than $1 for a meal. But they find ways to use the old sledgehammer on items not specifically under food control. I saw oysters on the menu at $4 a half dozen, small green salads at 75 cents, and the demi tasse was 30 cents. All of these "luxuries" of course, may be purchased in addition to the five shilling meal.

An obscure wall placard informed us there would be a charge of 95 cents for dancing, and one of 75 cents as a "house charge." No explanation of the house charge.

Our $10 dinner consisted of powdered egg, a small amount of meat, boiled potatoes, brussel sprouts, and a dessert made from substitute oils to resemble whipped cream. Champagne was $20 a bottle. We settled for a $3 bottle of pepped-up cider from Devon.

But if Johnny's pocketbook was sandbagged at the restaurant, it was really dragged at the night club which followed.

"Night club" is merely a courtesy name here. Few of them have floor shows or good food. The one we patronized, which was fairly representative, had dim lights to hide the shabby upholstery, a lackluster band and high-priced sandwiches.

Whisky $20 A Bottle
It is lightly assumed in these clubs that you ordered a bottle held aside during the day when liquor can be sold. This bit of foresight costs $20 a bottle for gin or whisky of an obscure brand. Soda is 60 cents a bottle and obligatory.

There were no taxis in sight when we left at 5 a. m. But after the doorman was tipped, he too found a way. He "thought" he might be able to find us a private car. Coincidentally, and at his signal, one whizzed out of the darkness—and it cost us $6 for the short ride home.

Johnny probably is sorry he wasn't born on February 29—so his birthday would come only once every four years.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Ex-GI Hopes Uncle Sam Forgives Stowaway Bride

NEW YORK, March 28—James P. McVey, 25, an ex-GI, hoped today that kind-hearted Uncle Sam would forgive his stowaway Irish bride and let him take her to the home he has picked out in Kentucky.

The bride, the former Maire O'Reilly, 26, a graduate of Dublin university, arrived here yesterday aboard the Liberty ship William L. Smith, on which her husband was a crewmember.

McVey, whose home is in Harlan, Ky., met Maire when he was training with the First Armored Division in North Ireland in 1942.

His outfit was sent to Africa before they could be married. McVey was wounded seriously and shipped back to this country where he was discharged.

That was in October, 1944, and a few weeks later, McVey enlisted in the Merchant Marine in the hope of getting back to Ireland to see Maire. After six months he finally secured a berth for England where he met and married her last September.

Since that time, he has been commuting back and forth to London. Two weeks ago he kissed his wife goodbye and boarded the William L. Smith, bound for America.

Twenty-two hours later, Maire was discovered in the ship's galley foraging for food. Even her husband hadn't known that she was aboard.

She was sent to Ellis Island pending a hearing before U. S. immigration authorities.

BIRTHDAY BINGE IS COSTLY ITEM TO ENGLISHMAN

London Prices Are Fantastic; Food, Taxis And Liquor All Come High

By Joan Twelftree
LONDON, March 28—A boy friend asked me to accompany him on a tour of the high spots last night—and it turned out to be the $64 question.

That's about what it costs the average Englishman in the middle income bracket to see a show, wine, dine and dance in these days of fantastic prices.

Pays To Stay Home
Unless the costs come down, an Englishman's home is not only going to be his castle—it's going to be his constant hideout.

This boy friend, Johnny, earns about $50 a week, which approximates the present pay of a member of parliament. It was his birthday—so he started things off by sending me a corsage. That set him back about $5.

After he arrived in a taxicab, I vetoed the idea of attending an early movie at $2.32 per. We had afternoon tea instead.

Quickies Come Dear
Two "quick ones" before show-time cost Johnny $1.50 each—and they were a weak mixture of bad gin and ersatz vermouth. We had two more during intermission—small "quick ones" at 50 cents each.

Restaurants are not permitted to charge more than $1 for a meal. But they find ways to use the old sledgehammer on items not specifically under food control. I saw oysters on the menu at $4 a half dozen, small green salads at 75 cents, and the demi tasse was 30 cents. All of these "luxuries," of course, may be purchased in addition to the five shilling meal.

An obscure wall placard informed us there would be a charge of 95 cents for dancing, and one of 75 cents as a "house charge." No explanation of the house charge.

Our $10 dinner consisted of powdered egg, a small amount of meat, boiled potatoes, brussels sprouts, and a dessert made from substitute oils to resemble whipped cream. Champagne was $20 a bottle. We settled for a $3 bottle of pepped-up cider from Devon.

But if Johnny's pocketbook was sandbagged at the restaurant, it was really dragged down at the night club which followed.

"Night club" is merely a courtesy name here. Few of them have floor shows or good food. The one we patronized, had dim lights to hide the shabby upholstery, a lackluster band and high-priced sandwiches.

Whisky $20 A Bottle
It is lightly assumed in these clubs that you ordered a bottle held aside during the day when liquor can be sold. This bit of foresight costs $20 a bottle for gin or whisky of an obscure brand. Soda is 60 cents a bottle and obligatory.

There were no taxis in sight when we left at 5 a. m. But after the doorman was tipped, he too found a way. He "thought" he might be able to find us a private car. Coincidentally, and at his signal, one whipped out of the darkness—and it cost us $6 for the short ride home.

Johnny probably is sorry he wasn't born on February 29—so his birthday would come only once every four years.

MINNESOTA'S CANDIDATE

HAROLD E. Stassen is not Minnesota's first presidential candidate. Back in 1908 when William Jennings Bryan seemed an inevitable choice to run for the third time, many anti-Bryan Democrats thought of Minnesota's Swedish governor, John A. Johnson had been elected in 1904 despite a Republican landslide, and re-elected in 1906. His appeal, apart from his record as governor, would have been as the first son of an immigrant to be chosen by a major party. This might of course have deterred some voters while attracting others. Ex-President Grover Cleveland, hoping to end Bryan's control of the party, told friends that Johnson was the best available candidate in sight.

In the end Bryan's hold was too strong. Johnson got 46 votes in the convention; but Bryan was nominated on the first ballot, only to lose the election to William H. Taft. Johnson was elected governor for the third time while Bryan was losing Minnesota, but died in office soon afterwards. His ability and winning personality made observers think that if he had lived, he might have been the Democratic nominee in 1912 instead of Woodrow Wilson.

MORE THAN COLLEGE

HUNTER College in the Bronx is famous for much more than its academic record. When the women's services were organized early in the war, Hunter became the first training school for pioneering Spars, Waves and Women Marines. Today as temporary quarters for the UNO Security Council it holds the attention of all the world.

Hunter students may have felt somewhat pushed around when the girls in navy blue started drilling on their athletic field and learning naval terminology in their classrooms. The present scholars are certainly taking a back seat as the statesmen and secretaries of 51 nations take over to talk the business of peace.

But few American college students have ever held box seats at such important world events as the Hunter women walking by their hastily remodelled gymnasium, now known as the UNO Council Chamber.

NO need to count on that new car for this year's summer vacation trip. Henry Ford II says it will be 18 months at least before a prospective car buyer can walk into a dealer's show room and pick out the car of his choice. Congress May Take Six-Month
Recess Beginning Mid-Summer Rayon May Oust King Cotton

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Congress is tentatively shooting for a mid-summer recess to carry into January, 1947—when the Constitution calls it back. It will be the first long recess, virtually, since the beginning of the great depression and Franklin D. Roosevelt's first inauguration.

The prolonged absence will give Capitol architects time to reinforce the ceilings of House and Senate chambers, already tottering from the reverberations of congressional oratory. And it will give members time to go home and mend fences, which may need it badly with the first post-war election in the offing.

Estimates of the time required to mend the roofs is six months. Some contractors claim they could do it in three.

Some members fear remaining in recess overlong, in event important post-war problems come up. Others fear they cannot mend their fences in less than six months—if at all.

● DESPITE THE DRIVE for old "King Cotton" all signs indicate he will be deposed by rayon at least for men's summer suits when the midyear temperatures rise. A representative of CPA reported this outlook:

Tropical worsteds will be scarce while cotton suits will be "very scarce." At the same time, he said, manufacturers are trending to-

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 28—I promised a few days back to judge the points raised in the Churchill-Stalin debate which seemed to stop halfway with Mr. Churchill's humorous last rejoinder and Stalin's subsequent silence, and I will do it today. The Churchill challenge, I believe, was raised primarily for diplomatic effect. I notice Stalin cooled considerably (if temporarily) on the warmest diplomatic subject then pending, Iran, soon after Churchill spoke. Moscow came down all the way from threatening open belligerency in the few ensuing days to a secret revolutionary movement in Iran and an open discussion about oil—discussion not being necessary if belligerency was to be consummated by a capture of that nation. The words of statesmen are generally selected for such effects.

Yet the points raised by both leaders contained sound observations which were not argued through to a conclusion when the effect was accomplished. Mr. Churchill recommended an Anglo-American alliance on the ground that the English speaking peoples had the same ideals. I think he incorrectly stated his point on this. The way of freedom for peoples has been preserved in the form—not of language—but of free parliamentary governments.

This method is not confined to any language. It is the effective way of life by which citizens of communities choose representatives to Parliament in free, secret balloting where all parties are given representation. In England, this is done through a Parliament which operates by a somewhat different method than our Congress. In France it is a Chamber of Deputies in a system more like ours, and so on.

The natural assimilation of peoples of the world—indeed one which has already been made through common ideals—is this common acceptance of parliamentarism. Stalin wholly misinterpreted this underlying ground of the Churchill speech. He called it a Hitler move for war. The Hitler methods and all totalitarianism are odious to free peoples. You could see underlying Stalin's whole rejoinder the idea that liberty is only liberty against fascism, not freedom of people.

Indeed, he has a Soviet and recently had an election but only one party was represented and it was recognized by all free people as a controlled popularity contest for his government. His Soviet does not represent parliamentarism in form because it is a council of workers carefully chosen by one party and subject to the will of the one party master at the top. Any ideological division of the world on this fundamental basis would put Stalin in league with the fascist nations, and parliamentary nations on the other side.

Not only that, but the whole system of action in Russia more nearly resembles the fascist. The Stalin answer, for instance, was not a radioed speech to the people like Churchill's, but it was presented as a series of selected questions made to him by his controlled newspaper, Pravda, together with his responses. (Contrast this with our free press conference methods common in one form or another in all parliamentary countries.)

Again, Stalin attributed the spread of Communism to the yearnings of the people in European nations he has seized. The people were not consulted in Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Yugoslavia and elsewhere. Whatever yearnings they had for or against Communism were not presented to the world at large. Communistic influence (Continued on Page Ten) ward the manufacture of rayon suits—which, being novel, are less hampered by price ceilings.

The same spokesman said that more suits of all types will appear on the market in the next six weeks than were available at this time last year. But they still will not be able to meet demands for a while.

● THE JAPANESE MANDATED ISLANDS may become the center of an international diplomatic storm, especially after the atom bomb tests this spring.

Leaders of the Army-Navy joint task force No. 1 feel that Bikini atoll, where the atom bomb tests will be held, must be isolated for some time to prevent other nations from "snooping" around to gather facts about the tests.

Thus, America will be telling the world that the area is private United States property, although the Allies have not yet settled the problem of dividing the islands which were seized from Japan. Trouble is also seen brewing with Australia over the United States desire to hold tiny Manus Island, north of New Guinea, as a base for possible use in any future war.

Russia has been more realistic about the war. Even before she pounced on Japan in the closing days of the conflict, she already had a secret agreement giving her the Kuriles.

● WINSTON CHURCHILL recently visited in Williamsburg, Va., the Colonial capital of the Old Dominion not far from Yorktown where another Britisher made history and changed the course of the world.

Williamsburg was restored through funds donated by John D. Rockefeller II. While in the old city, one of Churchill's aides, mindful of Rockefeller's generosity, handed the chubby ex-prime minister a book on the life of John D. Rockefeller II.

Churchill took the volume, looked at it and then said: "Humph, in Britain we number our Georges—over here they number their Rockefellers."

THE time to prevent hay fever is now.

Waiting until August and the open season for sneezes is like locking the barn door after the horse is gone. To be effective, preventive measures must be taken well in advance of the annual onset of the difficulty.

Hay fever is due to allergy or over-sensitivity. That is, persons with this condition react, as a rule, to the pollen from some plant, particularly the ragweed. In hay fever, there are such symptoms as watering of the eyes and a nasal discharge with a great deal of sneezing and discomfort.

Sensitivity Tests

Hay fever victims should have tests carried out to determine to just what substances they may be sensitive. These tests are made by injecting extracts of various kinds of pollen into the skin or by rubbing these extracts into scratches in the skin and noting whether any reaction occurs such as the formation of a red swelling at the point of injection.

To prevent attacks of hay fever, the usual method of treatment is to give injections of the pollen extract in gradually increasing doses. Many physicians favor giving these injections the year round. Others may start the injections three or four months before the usual hay fever season, which starts about the middle of August and lasts through September.

Prevent Attacks

Attempts to prevent the attacks have also been made by giving the pollen extract by mouth. Dr. Narcisse F. Thibierge of New Orleans believes that the use of this type of treatment is helpful in addition to giving of the pollen extract by injection, particularly if the patient travels a great deal or perhaps is one of those few who object to injections.

Dr. Thibierge thinks that this method of treatment cannot replace the injection method completely, because it is impossible to be certain how rapidly the extract will be absorbed or taken up in the body. He treated 82 patients giving the pollen extract by mouth over a period of one to three years.

Coated Pills

He used pills which were coated so that they would not dissolve in the stomach but only in the intestine. With this method of treatment, he was able to keep about one-sixth of the patients free from attacks of hay fever and to relieve the symptoms in about one-half. Three of the patients stated that the treatment made them worse.

Since it has been proved that pollen extract given by mouth is absorbed in the body and acts to make the patient less sensitive to pollen, many hay fever victims may find this new method of prevention helpful.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. S.: Will you please tell me something about conjunctivitis? Can it be cured and is it possible to lose your vision from it?

Answer: Conjunctivitis is caused by many types of infection. The treatment for the condition depends upon the kind of infection which is present. In most instances the condition can be cured. Unless the disorder is quite serious, it would not interfere with the vision.

H. R. Z.: Is it serious when a person finds blood and gravel in the urine?

Answer: Blood and gravel in the urine indicate that there is a tendency to kidney stone formation. Such a condition may be serious, depending upon how many stones are present and where they are located. An X-ray of the urinary tract would be advisable.

V. M. E.: Would the occasional use of alcoholic beverages be harmful to someone who has had cystitis?

Answer: Cystitis means inflammation of the bladder. Whether or not alcoholic beverages would be harmful to an individual who has had cystitis could only be determined by her physician after he has made an examination to determine her general physical state.

R. E. J.: What causes varicose veins? Is there any remedy or cure?

Answer: The cause of varicose veins is not definitely known. Wearing tight garters may be responsible in some cases. The usual treatment consists of injections into the veins, tying off of the veins, or removing them surgically.

SYNOPSIS
It all began when Jane Applebee, literary agent, was week-ending at Elmpoint, the new country estate of her married sister, Dita Pearce. Their older sister, Neal Tarant, the famous actress, had recently arrived from abroad, and Jane regretted having invited her to share her New York apartment. Neal always took what she wanted, and at this instance it was Jane's close friend and client, Deane Kennard, rising young novelist. Elmpoint had been purchased complete with furnishings, and Dita, soon in need of a nursery, had given the lush fittings of one of its borders to Neal for her room in Jane's apartment. Attractive Dr. Hunt Berwick, amateur criminologist and war buddy of Dita's husband, Dick, was also a week-end guest, and Jane invited him to a reception she was giving the following Wednesday for Margot Case-Ingalls, her most important author. Later that evening an exhausted but beautiful stranger, who introduced herself as Mrs. Brenda Knight, stopped at Elmpoint to inquire the way to the local hotel. She had arrived on an afternoon train and decided to walk from the station to the hotel, but had lost her way. Mrs. Knight collapsed, and later accepted Dick's invitation to spend the night. Jane made her comfortable in a room opposite hers, but during the night found her wandering around in the empty room which was the source of Neal's furniture. She apologized, saying she was looking for the bath. When Mrs. Knight left the next morning she insisted Jane give her her New York address so she might return the stockings she had borrowed, and Jane impulsively invited her to the reception. In New York, the following day, Jane tried unsuccessfully to persuade Deane Kennard not to rewrite his unpublished novel into a play for Neal. Margot Ingalls, who looked all of her years when Jane had seen her last, arrives from Hollywood a youthful, glamorous looking beauty. Jane is telling the story.

CHAPTER SIX

UNFORTUNATELY the miraculous improvement of my star author's looks hadn't helped her disposition. She was nervous and impatient, almost drove Claire Walling and me insane with her scatter-brained insistence on her reports and suggestions, and seemed much more anxious to see her dressmaker than her publishers.

By an odd chance the "great artist" who had created her marvelous wardrobe was none other than my funny little neighbor, Mr. Paul Woodford, generally known as "Polly." And her delight when she learned that he lived in the same house and on the same floor with us was boundless.

Waving all other plans aside, and without a by-your-leave to me, she rushed to the phone and invited her sartorial mentor to dine with us in my apartment.

Perhaps I would have balked at the imposition if meeting a fashionable dressmaker hadn't fitted in with my resolution to do something about my looks. But, as it was, I accepted her high-handedness with good grace and called up my trusted Rosa to order a special dinner.

I must admit, apart from shattering my aspirations to beauty, the evening was very pleasant.

We were just the three of us, as Neal was rehearsing late. Which was just as well, for she doubtless would have made the dapper little dressmaker the butt of her unholly wit. Not without reason.

Tailored to the nth degree, blatantly manicured and discreetly perfumed, he was the ideal model for so that traffic could be resumed.

A bronze plaque of Logan Elm was presented the Circleville library yesterday afternoon at a regular meeting of the board of trustees.

250 guests are invited to a reception April 4, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Weldon who were married last week. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Adkins and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Noecker will be hosts at the affair.

YOU'RE TELLING ME!

SPORTS WRITERS, in picking the New York Yankees to win the American league pennant, refer to them as the "people's choice." This does not include, however, the people who live in Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Boston, St. Louis, Chicago and Washington.

It's warm at the north and south poles of Venus, say astronomers. Get your space ship reservation now for your winter vacation.

The man at the next desk says he plans to buy one of those new sport planes when they are available. He says it is about time he enjoyed a little high life.

A writer speaks of what he calls the "scourge of victory." Hey, a comedy playwright. Everything about him was funny. From the French accent and mannerisms, Brooklyneese at times, to his motions: a peculiar sideways cocking of his sleek gray head and a bird-like jerking in his walk. No wonder his name had been transformed into the descriptive "Polly."

He was likable, though, in spite of his affectations. And I feel pretty sure his interest in me—shown only after Margot Ingalls' least, last problem had been settled—was genuine.

"It would give me the greatest pleasure to dress you, chere mademoiselle Applebee," he assured me with many Gallic gestures. "Parce que—eh bien—it is not the perfection that attracts the artist, but the possibility of the sublime. A little more here, and a little less there, and you would be magnifique. But magnifique!"

The "here" was my not too voluptuous bosom, and the "there" my beak of a nose. And the whole effusion was the start of a lecture on how to make oneself worthy of wearing his clothes.

The process included hours to be spent each day in a certain beauty parlor, and the gentle hint that a slight operation to remove the too much of my nose would be highly advisable.

I'm afraid it put an end to all my dreams.

I had thought of a new hair-do, and a lot of new clothes. But I had neither the time, patience or indifference to pain Polly Woodford seemed to consider essential for "the best results."

On Tuesday and Wednesday my conferences with Margot Ingalls' many publishers were complicated by last minute preparations for the reception to such a degree I wished I had never planned it. But once I had changed into my glad rags, and the first guests were trickling in, I perked up and decided the result was worth all the fuss and hurry.

The drawing room, profuse with flowers from the Elmpoint greenhouses, looked charming. The prematurely-white Claire Walling, distinguished in smart black and the old-fashioned diamonds Aunt Jane had left her, presided regally over the tea table in the dining room. And, best of all, Neal had told me she was too busy rehearsing to come, so my home was really mine this afternoon!

By half past five the place was teeming with the great and near-great of the publishing world, plus all the better-known New York authors who were anxious to compliment my famous client on her work—and her looks—and I was kept busy introducing people to her and hadn't a moment for the handful of personal friends, relatives and acquaintances I'd asked to come.

In Dick's case it didn't matter. He was family and didn't expect special attention. Anyway, he vanished into the dining room with an understanding wink at me after a few polite words to my quest of honor. And my forced neglect of Polly Woodford and Hunt Berwick didn't bother my conscience either. They both knew how to take care of themselves.

The little courier minced in, pearl gray from head to toe, twittered something about a private fashion show for us in his apartment, Friday night at nine-thirty, and after our acceptance lost himself in the crowd. In search of "possibilities of the sublime" I suppose. And Hunt Berwick, who arrived while Margot Ingalls was so deep in talk with a literary bigwig that no introduction was possible, just shook hands with me and then imitated Dick and went into the dining room.

But when a few minutes later Brenda Knight appeared, smartly dressed, lovelier than I'd remembered and shyly offering me a small package—the borrowed stockings—tied to a corsage of pink camellias, it was a different matter entirely.

I can't account for my changing reactions to her which, up to then, had shifted from pity to exasperation to dim suspicions of I-know-not-what. I only know I was honestly glad to see her and sorry I couldn't steer her to a nice crowd—or rather, I was glad to see her and saw that she had a good time. I did my best to help her by telling her Dick and Hunt were in the dining room. I was relieved when I saw her soon afterwards laughing and chatting with Polly Woodford, whom she seemed to know well. Probably, because he was her dressmaker.

Once I no longer had visions of her standing about, lost and lonely, she slipped my mind. Especially when Deane Kennard's publisher approached and asked me, "Where's Kennard? And how's his new novel—or haven't you read it yet?" I realized then that the obscure feeling of something wrong I'd had for the last half hour was Deane's continued absence.

I hadn't seen him since his tempestuous exit from my office on Monday. But even if he was still angry with me, staying away from my reception was foolish. And unpardonably rude besides, because it put me in the unpleasant position of explaining his latest vagary concerning the new book to the publisher who had done so much for him.

However, I was saved the difficult task by a sudden commotion at the entrance door that, to my dismay, was dominated by a throaty laugh I knew well. The next moment, in walked Neal, followed by a whole comet's tail of men. Among them several uniforms, her producer, her leading man, a handsome young South American she'd annexed since her return, whose name was Tonio Valente, and—Deane Kennard!

That was the end of my reception as planned. Neal passed Margot Ingalls and me with a casual "Hello there, you two." And with her passing the center of the gathering shifted. From Margot Ingalls to her. From the middle of the room to the fireplace side of it where Neal had thrown himself into a deep chair, flinging Valente's fur and hat with a brief "Throw them to Jones, angel, will you?" and then stating loudly, "I say! Look at all the lovely people! Anybody got a match for me?"

It seemed everybody had a match. At least, every man had.

Groups broke up all over the room to form again—around Neal. Men streamed in from the dining room. Men pushed and jostled to get near Neal and be introduced.

It was the meanest thing Neal could have done. First saying she wouldn't dream of cutting rehearsal for my stupid reception and then barging in and spoiling it. (To Be Continued)

Having heard the bidding, the leader has some kind of line on the total strength of the opponents and also on their suit lengths. But he cannot always know just how the hands fit. In the long run, his knowledge about how contracts get made and beaten will help him to pick the soundest lead a good percentage of the time. But on any one occasion the lead which seems best to him may prove the worst, and vice-versa.

South for jumping direct to the grand slam, even though the freak spade division made it unscorable.

Where South played the hand at 7-Spades, the lead was usually a heart or a club. That enabled the declarer to score his spade A, heart tops and club A, take two diamonds for one heart discard and the club K for another, return to his hand with a heart ruff, take his heart A and K, then throw East in with the spade 5 to the 6.

At one table, however, West was a very inexperienced player, and made what would on the bidding be considered probably the worst lead possible, the dummy's suit of diamonds. That, however, broke communications between the declarer's hand and dummy and made it impossible for him ever to use the club K for a heart discard.

MINNESOTA'S CANDIDATE

HAROLD E. Stassen is not Minnesota's first presidential candidate. Back in 1908 when William Jennings Bryan seemed an inevitable choice to run for the third time, many anti-Bryan Democrats thought of Minnesota's Swedish governor, John A. Johnson had been elected in 1904 despite a Republican landslide, and re-elected in 1906. His appeal, apart from his record as governor, would have been as the first son of an immigrant to be chosen by a major party. This might of course have deterred some voters while attracting others. Ex-President Grover Cleveland, hoping to end Bryan's control of the party, told friends that Johnson was the best available candidate in sight.

In the end Bryan's hold was too strong. Johnson got 46 votes in the convention; but Bryan was nominated on the first ballot, only to lose the election to William H. Taft. Johnson was elected governor for the third time while Bryan was losing Minnesota, but died in office soon afterwards. His ability and winning personality made observers think that if he had lived, he might have been the Democratic nominee in 1912 instead of Woodrow Wilson.

MORE THAN COLLEGE

HUNTER College in the Bronx is famous for much more than its academic record. When the women's services were organized early in the war, Hunter became the first training school for pioneering Spars, Waves and Women Marines. Today as temporary quarters for the UNO Security Council it holds the attention of all the world.

Hunter students may have felt somewhat pushed around when the girls in navy blue started drilling on their athletic field and learning naval terminology in their classrooms. The present scholars are certainly taking a back seat as the statesmen and secretaries of 51 nations take over to talk the business of peace.

But few American college students have ever held box seats at such important world events as the Hunter women walking by their hastily remodelled gymnasium, now known as the UNO Council Chamber.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 28—I promised a few days back to judge the points raised in the Churchill-Stalin debate which seemed to stop halfway with Mr. Churchill's humorous last rejoinder and Stalin's subsequent silence, and I will do it today.

The Churchill challenge, I believe, was raised primarily for diplomatic effect. I notice Stalin cooled considerably (if temporarily) on the warmest diplomatic subject then pending, Iran, soon after Churchill spoke. Moscow came down all the way from threatening open belligerency in the few ensuing days to a secret revolutionary movement in Iran and an open discussion about oil—discussion not being necessary if belligerency was to be consummated by a capture of that nation. The words of statesmen are generally selected for such effects.

Yet the points raised by both leaders contained sound observations which were not argued through to a conclusion when the effect was accomplished. Mr. Churchill recommended an Anglo-American alliance on the ground that the English speaking peoples had the same ideals. I think he incorrectly stated his point on this. The way of freedom for peoples has been preserved in the form—not of language—but of free parliamentary governments.

This method is not confined to any language. It is the effective way of life by which citizens of communities choose representatives to Parliament in free, secret balloting where all parties are given representation. In England, this is done through a Parliament which operates by a somewhat different method than our Congress. In France it is a Chamber of Deputies in a system more like ours, and so on.

The natural assimilation of peoples of the world—indeed one which has already been made through common ideals—is this common acceptance of parliamentarianism.

Stalin wholly misinterpreted this underlying ground of the Churchill speech. He called it a Hitler move for war. The Hitler methods and all totalitarianism are odious to free peoples. You could see underlying Stalin's whole rejoinder the idea that liberty is only liberty against fascism, not freedom of people.

Indeed, he has a Soviet and recently had an election but only one party was represented and it was recognized by all free people as a controlled popularity contest for his government. His Soviet does not represent parliamentarianism in form because it is a council of workers carefully chosen by one party and subject to the will of the one party master at the top.

Any ideological division of the world on this fundamental basis would put Stalin in league with the fascist nations, and parliamentary nations on the other side.

Not only that, but the whole system of action in Russia more nearly resembles the fascist. The Stalin answer, for instance, was not a radioed speech to the people like Churchill's, but it was presented as a series of selected questions made to him by his controlled newspaper, Pravda, together with his responses. (Contrast this with our free press conference methods common in one form or another in all parliamentary countries.)

Again, Stalin attributed the spread of Communism to the yearnings of the people in European nations he has seized. The people were not consulted in Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Yugoslavia and elsewhere. Whatever yearnings they had for or against Communism were not presented to the world at large. Communistic influence.

By half past five the place was teeming with the great and near-great of the publishing world, plus all the better-known New York authors who were anxious to compliment my famous client on her work—and her looks—and I was kept busy introducing people to her and hadn't a moment for the handful of personal friends, relatives and acquaintances I'd asked to come.

In Dick's case it didn't matter. He was family and didn't expect special attention. Anyway, he vanished into the dining room with an understanding wink at me after a few polite words to my guest of honor. And my forced neglect of Polly Woodford and Hunt Berwick didn't bother my conscience either. They both knew how to take care of themselves.

The little couturier minced in, pearl gray from head to toe, twittered something about a private fashion show for us in his apartment, Friday night at nine-thirty, and after our acceptance lost himself in the crowd. In search of "possibilities of the sublime" I suppose. And Hunt Berwick, who arrives while Margot Ingalls was so deep in talk with a literary bigwig that an introduction was impossible, just shook hands with me and then limited Dick and went into the dining room.

But when a few minutes later Brenda Knight appeared, smartly dressed, lovelier than I'd remembered and shyly offering me a small package—the borrowed stockings—tied to a corsage of pink camellias, it was a different matter entirely.

I can't account for my changing reactions to her which, up to then, had shifted from pity to exasperation to dim suspicions of I-know-not-what. I only know I was honestly glad to see her and sorry I couldn't steer her to a nice crowd and I did my best to help her by telling her Dick and Hunt were in the dining room. I was relieved when I saw her soon afterwards laughing and chatting with Polly Woodford, whom she seemed to know well. Probably, because he was her dressmaker.

Once I no longer had visions of her standing about, lost and lonely, she slipped my mind. Especially when Deane Kennard's publisher approached and asked me, "Where's Kennard? And how's his new novel—or haven't you read it yet?" I realized then that the obscure feeling of something wrong I'd had for the last half hour was Deane's continued absence.

I hadn't seen him since his tempestuous exit from my office on Monday. But even if he was still angry with me, staying away from my reception was foolish. And unpardonably rude besides, because it put me in the unpleasant position of explaining his latest vagary concerning the new book to the publisher who had done so much for him.

However, I was saved the difficult task by a sudden commotion at the entrance door that, to my dismay, was dominated by a throaty laugh I knew well. The next moment, in walked Neal, followed by a whole comet's tail of men. Among them several uniformed, her producer, her leading man, a handsome young South American she'd annexed since her return, whose name was Tonio Valme, and—Deane Kennard!

That was the end of my reception as planned.

Neal passed Margot Ingalls and me with a casual "Hello there, you two." And with her passing the center of the gathering shifted. From Margot Ingalls to her. From the middle of the room to the fireplace side of it where Neal had thrown herself into a deep chair, flinging Valente her furs and hat with a brief "Throw them to Jones, angel, will you?" and then sitting loudly. "I say! Look at all the lovely people! Anybody got a match for me?"

It seemed everybody had a match. At least, every man had.

Groups broke up all over the room to form again—around Neal. Men streamed in from the dining room. Men pushed and jostled to get near Neal and be introduced.

It was the meanest thing Neal could have done. First saying she wouldn't dream of cutting rehearsal for my stupid reception and then barging in and spoiling it.

"The Authority on Authorities"

A SHOT IN THE DARK

NO SINGLE play shows the defenders at such a great disadvantage as the opening lead. Having heard the bidding, the leader has some kind of line on the total strength of the opponents and also on their suit lengths. But he cannot always know just how his knowledge about how contracts get made and beaten will help him to pick the soundest lead a good percentage of the time. But on any one occasion the lead which seems best to him may prove the worst, and vice-versa.

Congress May Take Six-Month As Summer Suiting Material
Recess Beginning Mid-Summer Rayon May Oust King Cotton

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Congress is tentatively shooting for a mid-summer recess to carry into January, 1947—when the Constitution calls it back. It will be the first long recess, virtually, since the beginning of the great depression and Franklin D. Roosevelt's first inauguration.

The prolonged absence will give Capitol architects time to reinforce the ceilings of House and Senate chambers, already tottering from the reverberations of congressional oratory. And it will give members time to go home and mend fences, which may need it badly with the first post-war election in the offing.

Estimates of the time required to mend the roofs is six months. Some contractors claim they could do it in three.

Some members fear remaining in recess overlong, in event important post-war problems come up. Others fear they cannot mend their fences in less than six months—if at all.

DESPITE THE DRIVE for old "King Cotton" all signs indicate he will be deposed by rayon at least for men's summer suits when the midyear temperatures rise. A representative of CPA reported this outlook:

Tropical worsteds will be scarce while cotton suits will be "very scarce." At the same time, he said, manufacturers are trending toward the manufacture of rayon suits—which, being novel, are less hampered by price ceilings.

The same spokesman said that more suits of all types will appear on the market in the next six weeks than were available at this time last year. But they still will not be able to meet demands for a while.

THE JAPANESE MANDATED ISLANDS may become the center of an international diplomatic storm, especially after the atom bomb tests this spring.

Leaders of the Army-Navy joint task force No. 1 feel that Bikini atoll, where the atom bomb tests will be held, must be isolated for some time to prevent other nations from "snooping" around to gather facts about the tests.

Thus, America will be telling the world that the area is private United States property, although the Allies have not yet settled the problem of dividing the islands which were seized from Japan. Trouble is also seen brewing with Australia over the United States desire to hold tiny Manus island, north of New Guinea, as a base for possible use in any future war.

Russia has been more realistic about the war. Even before she pounced on Japan in the closing days of the conflict, she already had a secret agreement giving her the Kuriles.

WINSTON CHURCHILL recently visited in Williamsburg, Va., the Colonial capital of the Old Dominion not far from Yorktown where another Britisher made history and changed the course of the world.

Williamsburg was restored through funds donated by John D. Rockefeller II. While in the old city, one of Churchill's aides, mindful of Rockefeller's generosity, handed the chubby ex-prime minister a book on the life of John D. Rockefeller II.

Churchill took the volume, looked at it and then said: "Humph, in Britain we number our Georges—over here they number their Rockefellers."

"The theme of the Convention," said Mrs. Young, "Stressed the great faith in the future. Our girls are the clay from which nations shall be molded. It is in their power to say whether the world shall rise or fall." BOBCATS BOOK 9 GRID GAMES FOR THIS YEAR

Muskies, Bishops, Dayton and Xavier Are New Foes On '46 Schedule

ATHENS, Ohio, March 28—Athletic Director Don C. Peden announced today that Ohio University's football team will play nine games next fall, five of them with last season's opponents.

Muskingum College, Ohio Wesleyan University, University of Dayton and Xavier University are the four teams to be met on the gridiron in addition to eleven played last year.

Season Opens Sept. 28
The Bobcats will open the season here Sept. 28 against Murray, Ky., State Teachers. The Kentucky game was the last one of eight played during the 1945 season.

While Coach Peden was not optimistic about next fall's prospects, he did think "we will have a better team than we had last year" when the Bobcats won only three games. Spring football practice came to an end this week.

Ohio University, one of five teams in the new Mid-American Conference of Urban Universities, will take on only one loop opponent as the schools agreed that regular league competition in all sports would not begin until the start of the 1946-47 basketball season. The University of Cincinnati, to be played Oct. 19, is a conference member, previously often met.

Other Loop Teams
Other loop members are Western Reserve of Cleveland, Butler University of Indianapolis, and Wayne University of Detroit.

The Ohio University football schedule for next fall:

Sept. 28—Murray, Ky., State Teachers, here; Oct. 5—Western Michigan; Oct. 12—Muskingum College, here; Oct. 19—University of Cincinnati; Oct. 26—Miami University, here; Nov. 2—Ohio Wesleyan; Nov. 9—Baldwin-Wallace College, here; Nov. 16—University of Dayton, here; and Nov. 23—Xavier University.

STEPHENS GETS MEXICAN OFFER

Holdout Shortstop May Quit Browns To Enter New Foreign League

LONG BEACH, Calif., March 28—Vern Stephens, the St. Louis Browns' holdout shortstop and one of the American League's leading hitters, announced today he was leaving for Laredo, Tex., to confer with Jorge Pasquel concerning the possibility of playing in the Mexican baseball league this summer.

"He telephoned me yesterday and asked me to meet him and talk things over," Stephens said.

Pasquel, president of the eight-team circuit, did not make a definite offer, Stephens said, adding that he would make no decision until he has heard Pasquel's proposition and discussed his 1946 contract with the Browns again.

The 25-year-old shortstop, usually the Browns' cleanup hitter, originally rejected his contract not because of the salary offer but in protest against a "good conduct" clause which was written in for the first time.

NATURAL RUBBER GOLF BALLS TO BE BACK SOON

BUFFALO, March 28—Natural rubber golf balls, the kind with a prewar bounce, will be back on the market by late May or early June, the Dunlop Rubber Company announced today.

Dunlop has ceased producing synthetic balls and is beginning to turn out the natural rubber pellets in "moderate quantities." Production is expected to reach 24,000 a week, considerably short of the 42,000 prewar weekly output.

Tennis equipment also is making a comeback. Balls are being produced at a 42,000 per week rate while about 400 tennis racquets are being put out every week.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 28—The Cincinnati Reds left the lair of the Detroit Tigers today with their reputation intact as the terrors of the Citrus circuit.

ABC TO BOOST BOWLING PRIZES

Syracuse Store Clerk Lands In Second Place In Singles Division

BUFFALO, March 28—Directors and officials of the American Bowling Congress indicated today that prize money for the annual championships would be substantially increased starting with the 1947 tournament at Los Angeles.

Secretary Elmer Baumgarten of Milwaukee has introduced a resolution to charge an extra fee in addition to the $5 entry price in order to boost the awards.

The only change in the standings during yesterday's tournament action was wrought by Bill Ours, 29-year-old Syracuse store clerk, who came within one strike of taking the lead in the singles division, finally ending with a 692 score and second place.

Opening with games of 233 and 225, Ours finished with a 234, to fall just 23 pins back of the 715 that Sgt. Ed Easter of Waukegan, Ill., rolled more than a week ago to capture first place. Ours drew a 4-6 split on his final shot when a strike would have given him the lead.

Your Check-List for Electrical Service

- ✓ ADEQUATE SERVICE ENTRANCE—Large enough wire and service switch to carry sufficient load for the entire home.
- ✓ MODERN PROTECTION—Install circuit-breakers, an improvement over fuses. This protective device accommodates momentary peak loads, "cuts out" only when the extra load continues.
- ✓ ENOUGH CIRCUITS—There's a limit to the number of lights and appliances electrical wiring can supply—make sure your new wiring has enough circuits to supply all areas.
- ✓ LARGE ENOUGH WIRES—Wire of a given size can carry only so much electricity. Be sure wiring is adequate for present and future needs.
- ✓ HIGH QUALITY WIRING DEVICES—Convenience outlets and switches are made in different qualities—at varying prices. It pays to install the best—Underwriters' Approved quality wiring devices.
- ✓ ENOUGH OUTLETS—An outlet for every appliance and lamp, plus a few extras.

You can't fill a jug any faster than the funnel can handle the flow—that's obvious. Maybe you never realized there's a funnel in your home's electrical system, the wires and switch that make up the electric service entrance. Unless it's big enough—has sufficient capacity—that service entrance "funnel" may prove to be too small to serve fully your home's electrical requirements. When you build or remodel, be sure the electric service entrance "funnel" is big enough for your home's needs—now and in the future.

BOBCATS BOOK 9 GRID GAMES FOR THIS YEAR

Muskies, Bishops, Dayton And Xavier Are New Foes On '46 Schedule

ATHENS, Ohio, March 28—Athletic Director Don C. Peden announced today that Ohio University's football team will play nine games next fall, five of them with last season's opponents.

Muskingum College, Ohio Wesleyan University, University of Dayton and Xavier University are the four teams to be met on the gridiron in addition to eleven played last year.

Season Opens Sept. 28
The Bobcats will open the season here Sept. 28 against Murray, Ky., State Teachers. The Kentucky game was the last one of eight played during the 1945 season.

While Coach Peden was not optimistic about next fall's prospects, he did think "we will have a better team than we had last year" when the Bobcats won only three games. Spring football practice came to an end this week.

Ohio University, one of five teams in the new Mid-American Conference of Urban Universities, will take on only one loop opponent as the schools agreed that regular league competition in all sports would not begin until the start of the 1946-47 basketball season. The University of Cincinnati, to be played Oct. 19, is a conference member, previously often met.

Other Loop Teams
Other loop members are Western Reserve of Cleveland, Butler University of Indianapolis, and Wayne University of Detroit.

The Ohio University football schedule for next fall:

Sept. 28—Murray, Ky., State Teachers, here; Oct. 5—Western Michigan; Oct. 12—Muskingum College, here; Oct. 19—University of Cincinnati; Oct. 26—Miami University, here; Nov. 2—Ohio Wesleyan; Nov. 9—Baldwin-Wallace College, here; Nov. 16—University of Dayton, here; and Nov. 23—Xavier University.

STEPHENS GETS MEXICAN OFFER
Holdout Shortstop May Quit Browns To Enter New Foreign League

LONG BEACH, Calif., March 28—Vern Stephens, the St. Louis Browns' holdout shortstop and one of the American League's leading hitters, announced today he was leaving for Laredo, Tex., to confer with Jorge Pasquel concerning the possibility of playing in the Mexican baseball league this summer.

"He telephoned me yesterday and asked me to meet him and talk things over," Stephens said.

Pasquel, president of the eight-team circuit, did not make a definite offer, Stephens said, adding that he would make no decision until he has heard Pasquel's proposition and discussed his 1946 contract with the Browns again.

The 25-year-old shortstop, usually the Browns' cleanup hitter, originally rejected his contract not because of the salary offer but in protest against a "good conduct" clause which was written in for the first time.

ROOKIE PACES PIRATES
EL CENTRO, Calif., March 28—Rookie Ralph Kiner continued to pace the Pittsburgh Pirates' home run hitters today with six. He swatted his latest one yesterday, alone with First Baseman Elbie Fletcher and Rip Sewell, as the Bucs lost to the Chicago White Sox 11 to 9.

NATURAL RUBBER GOLF BALLS TO BE BACK SOON

BUFFALO, March 28—Natural rubber golf balls, the kind with a prewar bounce, will be back on the market by late May or early June, the Dunlop Rubber Company announced today.

Dunlop has ceased producing synthetic balls and is beginning to turn out the natural rubber pellets in "moderate quantities." Production is expected to reach 24,000 a week, considerably short of the 42,000 prewar weekly output.

Tennis equipment also is making a comeback. Balls are being produced at a 42,000 per week rate while about 400 tennis racquets are being put out every week.

REDS TRIP TIGERS
LAKELAND, Fla., March 28—The Cincinnati Reds left the lair of the Detroit Tigers today with their reputation intact as the terrors of the Citrus circuit.

Fresh from winning their all-Ohio series with the Cleveland Indians 5 games to 1, the Reds scored their third straight victory over the Tigers yesterday, 4 to 3, on Catcher Ray Lamanno's seventh inning home run with one man on base. Big Al Benton, 13-game winner with the world champions last season, yielded all of Cincinnati's runs.

RIGGS SWAMPS BUDGE
BOSTON, March 28—Bobby Riggs of Los Angeles held a 10-match lead over Don Budge of Oakland, Calif., today in their professional tennis championship tour. Riggs whipped his taller, red-haired opponent last night, 6-2, 7-5, to win his 10 victory in 11 matches.

ABC TO BOOST BOWLING PRIZES

Syracuse Store Clerk Lands In Second Place In Singles Division

BUFFALO, March 28—Directors and officials of the American Bowling Congress indicated today that prize money for the annual championships would be substantially increased starting with the 1947 tournament at Los Angeles.

Secretary Elmer Baumgarten of Milwaukee has introduced a resolution to charge an extra fee in addition to the $5 entry price in order to boost the awards.

The only change in the standings during yesterday's tournament action was wrought by Bill Ours, 29-year-old Syracuse store clerk, who came within one strike of taking the lead in the singles division, finally ending with a 692 score and second place.

Opening with games of 233 and 225, Ours finished with a 234, to fall just 23 pins back of the 715 that Sgt. Ed Easter of Waukegan, Ill., rolled more than a week ago to capture first place. Ours drew a 4-6 split on his final shot when a strike would have given him the lead.

ISALY'S BOW TO IGNITION QUINTET BY 30-24 SCORE

The Ignition five knocked Isaly's out of the first round championship also. The score Wednesday night was 30-24.

Joe Kenney led the Isaly scorers with 12 markers. Donnelly was high for the winners.

"Moe" Grover was the defensive star of the evening holding Donnelly to five points in the last half. Donnelly is the star of the Ignition team.

COUNTY HOME CHILDREN HEAR STORY SESSION

Circleville Librarian Gives Outline Of Reading In Local Schools

Children at the Pickaway County Home were entertained by a story hour session given by Mrs. Enid Denham, Circleville librarian, during a visit at the Home recently.

Stories told included "Ned and the Rustlers," by Tousey, a story of cattle thieves and a small boy's part in their capture, and two of the "Nicomachus" stories so popular with children at the city library.

It is hoped that this first story hour may develop into a monthly event, and that these children may visit the children's room in Circleville and withdraw books from the collection there. This is but one of the new projects planned by the librarian and her staff as part of the county service.

School Reading Up
Schools in the county have been turning in very satisfactory records in reading. Madison Township school, whose grades are from first to eighth only, with a registration of about 78 pupils, has a total circulation for home use of 752 volumes.

During less than a three-month period, the children averaged almost ten books each for supplementary reading. Williamsport, seventh and eighth grades and high school, read more than 800 books in the same period. Some of the titles bore as many as 22 circulations. Monroe took 250 books from our library collection. These collections are sent out usually at the rate of a book a child to the county schools, and the pupils may take them home to read. As a rule they are supplementary reading—for pleasure or the pursuit of some hobby.

Teachers Spur Project
Several teachers have interested the children in books and good reading. One reported that her class at first seemed interested only in illustrations, but now follows a special course in order to obtain reading certificates.

In the city several of the grades are also following this course of reading and are asking for the "Reading Circle" books for their age and grade.

This year's (1946-47) Reading Circle Books all of which are in the library are: First Grade: "Prayer for A Child," "Friendly Animals," "Count the Puppies," "Forgetful Elephant," "Brother and Sister," "Ladybug who Couldn't Fly Home."

Second Grade: "Little Fellow," "Mr. Wren's House," "Twinkle, the Baby Colt," "Woolly Lamb," "Burlap," "Muggins."

Third Grade: "Turtles," "Squippy, Little Skye Terrier," "Golden Dictionary," "Let's Do Better," "Blain Princess," "Three Smart Squirrels & Squeak."

Fourth Grade: "Augustus Saves a Ship," "Betsy and the Boys," "Donkey for the King," "Kit Carson, Boy Trapper," "Mystery of the Secret Drawer," "Book of Indians."

Fifth Grade: "Strawberry Girl," "Burro of Barnegat Road," "Henry's Lincoln," "George Carver: Boy Scientist," "Sod-House Days," "Boy and a Dog."

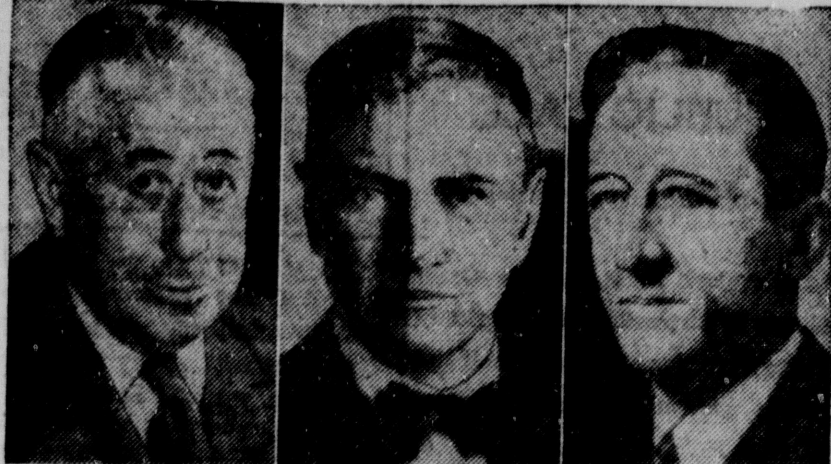

Sixth Grade: "Mystery of the Creaking Windmill," "Little Boat Boy," "What and What-Not," "Canada and Her Story," "Unburied Treasure," "Stocky, Boy of Texas."

Seventh Grade: "Jonathan's Doorstep," "Laurel for Judy," "Land of the Russian People," "Galewood Crossing," "Magical Melons," "Forest Ranger."

Eighth Grade: "Raymond L. Ditmars," "Junior Sports Anthology," "Shavetail Sam," "Wilderness Champion," "Green Peace," and "Overseas with the Air Transport Command."

NEW BATHTUB STOLEN
TUCSON, Ariz.—S. E. Gates reported to police that someone drove up a new brick driveway to his new house, picked up a 380-pound brand-new bathtub ready for installation, walked through a new living room and new front door and left.

SANITY VERDICT DOOMS FATHER, SON TO DEATH

Both To Hang For Murder Of Elderly Iowa Resort Man In 1945

FT. MADISON, Ia., March 28—

A father and son, condemned to die simultaneously on the gallows tomorrow, are showing their first signs of fear, their Catholic chaplain said today.

Any hope that Philip Heincy, 72, and his son, William, 45, might have had of escaping the nation's first double hanging of a father and son vanished yesterday when two psychiatrists found them sane.

Rather Be Dead
Afterward, they told the Rev. Herman V. Bongers, Catholic chaplain, that "we'd rather be dead than spend the rest of our lives in an insane asylum."

"They're getting very nervous, though," Bongers said. "This is the first time either of them—especially the father—has shown any signs of nervousness."

The Heincys, who were condemned to death in January, 1945, for the brutal murder of Robert W. Raebel, 65, West Okoboji, Ia., lake resort operator, will climb the 13 steps of the prison's collapsible twin gallows shortly before 6 a. m. tomorrow.

Simultaneous Hanging
Sheriff Joe L. McQuirk of Dickinson County, where the Heincys were sentenced, will spring the traps simultaneously at 6 o'clock.

Bongers, who converted the Heincys to Catholicism when they entered death row more than a year ago described them as "almost completely illiterate."

"The father can neither read nor write, and the son can read and write only a few simple words,"

he told the United Press.

"Phillip went to school for one month and William gave up after two attempts."

Bongers said neither of the men had any conception of the meaning of God.

"It was a long, slow process to reach them," he explained, "because even the simplest ideas had to be explained fully."

Men Are Not Bitter
Bongers said the Heincys are not bitter over their fate, except that "both of them feel that they didn't have a chance to tell their story at the hearing."

The Heincys will be taken from death row at 8 p. m. today to the inspector's office. There they will spend the last night in company of Bongers and a prison guard.

At 4:30 a. m. tomorrow Bongers will say mass for the condemned men and give them Holy Communion. He will administer Extreme Unction immediately after the traps are sprung and before doctors pronounce the Heincys dead.

When captured at Quincy, Ill., Jan. 6, 1945, the Heincys readily admitted killing Raebel.

Robbery Premeditated
They said they travelled by train from Quincy to Spirit Lake, and walked the five miles to the Raebel home.

As Raebel came from the basement after firing his furnace, William shot him through the base of the skull with a .22 pistol. The old man staggered into the living room and collapsed.

Upon demand from the Heincys, Mrs. Raebel gave up her purse and Raebel's billfold. Then, as she bent over to aid her dying husband the Heincys beat both of them over the head with a blackjack.

Mrs. Raebel survived after spending several months in a Spirit Lake hospital.

VINSON PLEADS FOR EXTENSION OF PRICE RULES

WASHINGTON, March 28—Secretary of Treasury Fred M. Vinson today urged extension of price controls beyond their June 30 expiration to prevent the economic collapse that followed World War I.

Vinson told the House banking committee that price control did not stifle production during the war. And "in spite of the obstacles we have had," he added, "The expansion of peacetime production in the period since V-J day as a whole has been more rapid than in any other period of our history." The secretary said prices spiraled after World War I when there was no retail rationing and little emphasis on direct price control.

It is hoped that this first story hour may develop into a monthly event, and that these children may visit the children's room in Circleville and withdraw books from the collection there. This is but one of the new projects planned by the librarian and her staff as part of the county service.

School Reading Up
Schools in the county have been turning in very satisfactory records in reading. Madison Township school, whose grades are from first to eighth only, with a registration of about 78 pupils, has a total circulation for home use of 752 volumes.

During less than a three-month period, the children averaged almost ten books each for supplementary reading. Williamsport, seventh and eighth grades and high school, read more than 800 books in the same period. Some of the titles bore as many as 22 circulations. Monroe took 250 books from our library collection.

These collections are sent out usually at the rate of a book a child to the county schools, and the pupils may take them home to read. As a rule they are supplementary reading—for pleasure or the pursuit of some hobby.

Teachers Spur Project
Several teachers have interested the children in books and good reading. One reported that her class at first seemed interested only in illustrations, but now follows a special course in order to obtain reading certificates.

In the city several of the grades are also following this course of reading and are asking for the "Reading Circle" books for their age and grade.

This year's (1946-47) Reading Circle Books all of which are in the library are: First Grade: "Prayer for a Child," "Friendly Animals," "Count the Puppies," "Forgetful Elephant," "Brother and Sister," "Ladybug who Couldn't Fly Home."

Second Grade: "Little Fellow," "Mr. Wren's House," "Twinkle, the Baby Colt," "Woolly Lamb," "Burlap," "Muggins."

Third Grade: "Turtles," "Squippy, Little Skye Terrier," "Golden Dictionary," "Let's Do Better," "Blain Princess," "Three Smart Squirrels & Squeak."

Fourth Grade: "Augustus Saves a Ship," "Betsy and the Boys," "Donkey for the King," "Kit Carson, Boy Trapper," "Mystery of the Secret Drawer," "Book of Indians."

Fifth Grade: "Strawberry Girl," "Burro of Barnegat Road," "Henry's Lincoln," "George Carver: Boy Scientist," "Sod-House Days," "Boy and a Dog."

Sixth Grade: "Mystery of the Creaking Windmill," "Little Boat Boy," "What and What-Not," "Canada and Her Story," "Unburied Treasure," "Stocky, Boy of Texas."

Seventh Grade: "Jonathan's Doorstep," "Laurel for Judy," "Land of the Russian People," "Galewood Crossing," "Magical Melons," "Forest Ranger."

Eighth Grade: "Raymond L. Ditmars," "Junior Sports Anthology," "Shavetail Sam," "Wilderness Champion," "Green Peace," and "Overseas with the Air Transport Command."

SANITY VERDICT DOOMS FATHER, SON TO DEATH

Both To Hang For Murder Of Elderly Iowa Resort Man In 1945

FT. MADISON, Ia., March 28—A father and son, condemned to die simultaneously on the gallows tomorrow, are showing their first signs of fear, their Catholic chaplain said today.

Any hope that Philip Heincy, 72, and his son, William, 45, might have had of escaping the nation's first double hanging of a father and son vanished yesterday when two psychiatrists found them sane.

Rather Be Dead
Afterward, they told the Rev. Herman V. Bongers, Catholic chaplain, that "we'd rather be dead than spend the rest of our lives in an insane asylum."

"They're getting very nervous, though," Bongers said. "This is the first time either of them—especially the father—has shown any signs of nervousness."

The Heincys, who were condemned to death in January, 1945, for the brutal murder of Robert W. Raebel, 65, West Okoboji, Ia., lake resort operator, will climb the 13 steps of the prison's collapsible twin gallows shortly before 6 a. m. tomorrow.

Simultaneous Hanging
Sheriff Joe L. McQuirk of Dickinson County, where the Heincys were sentenced, will spring the traps simultaneously at 6 o'clock. Bongers, who converted the Heincys to Catholicism when they entered death row more than a year ago described them as "almost completely illiterate."

"The father can neither read nor write, and the son can read and write only a few simple words."

he told the United Press.

"Phillip went to school for one month and William gave up after two attempts."

Bongers said neither of the men had any conception of the meaning of God.

"It was a long, slow process to reach them," he explained, "because even the simplest ideas had to be explained fully."

Men Are Not Bitter
Bongers said the Heincys are not bitter over their fate, except that "both of them feel that they didn't have a chance to tell their story at the hearing."

The Heincys will be taken from death row at 8 p. m. today to the inspector's office. There they will spend the last night in company of Bongers and a prison guard.

At 4:30 a. m. tomorrow Bongers will say mass for the condemned men and give them Holy Communion. He will administer Extreme Unction immediately after the traps are sprung and before doctors pronounce the Heincys dead.

When captured at Quincy, Ill., Jan. 6, 1945, the Heincys readily admitted killing Raebel.

Robbery Premeditated
They said they travelled by train from Quincy to Spirit Lake, and walked the five miles to the Raebel home.

As Raebel came from the basement after firing his furnace, William shot him through the base of the skull with a .22 pistol. The old man staggered into the living room and collapsed.

Upon demand from the Heincys, Mrs. Raebel gave up her purse and Raebel's billfold. Then, as she bent over to aid her dying husband the Heincys beat both of them over the head with a blackjack.

Mrs. Raebel survived after spending several months in a Spirit Lake hospital.

VINSON PLEADS FOR EXTENSION OF PRICE RULES

WASHINGTON, March 28—Secretary of Treasury Fred M. Vinson today urged extension of price controls beyond their June 30 expiration to prevent the economic collapse that followed World War I.

Vinson told the House banking committee that price control did not stifle production during the war. And "in spite of the obstacles we have had," he added, "the expansion of peacetime production in the period since V-J day as a whole has been more rapid than in any other period of our history." The secretary said prices spiraled after World War I when there was no retail rationing and little emphasis on direct price control.

NEWS Behind the NEWS
By PAUL MALLON
ence did not grow in Europe from this method, but by seizure of governments or by instituting aggressive, political movements in such nations as France and Italy; where parliamentary forms prevailed.
And in none of these parliamentary nations even yet has a majority favored Communism. Among the parliamentary countries, the Communists have their strongest representation in France where it was necessary for them to make a combination with the Socialists, their former hated rivals, in order to win even the status of a segment in a coalition cabinet.
These are the points I would like to have seen Mr. Churchill pursue. They could be followed all the way through both speeches. If this had been done, the international atmosphere might have been cleared by the debate and a ground for the common understanding established. As I say, I think they stopped half-way.

GERMANY FACES PERIOD OF DIRE ECONOMIC NEED
War-Making Potential To Be Crushed, Nation Reduced To Secondary Power
BERLIN, March 28—Germany's war-making potential will be forever crushed and Hitler's once powerful Reich will be reduced to a second class industrial nation under plans approved unanimously by the Allied Control Council, it was disclosed today.
The German standard of living will be set at approximately two-thirds of the 1930-38 level—a period when the Wehrmacht was rolling triumphantly across Europe.
The heavy industries which supplied Hitler's legions will go for reparations, official sources revealed. Substantial exports from light industries will be used to pay for imports, particularly food.
Specific controls on the manufacture of raw materials will be decided at the peace conference.
An annual production of 5.8 million tons of steel will be allowed, but the production of magnesium, primary aluminum, synthetic rubber, oil, aircraft, sea-going ships, and arms or ammunition of any type will be banned under the Allied program.
American officials believe the approved plan will enable the long-delayed reparations program to be completed within a month.
The four Allied powers used the estimates of four groups of experts to determine what industrial equipment can be removed from Germany as reparations—and still assure a minimum standard of living for the once-proud Reich.
Population Estimated
In arriving at the plan for Germany's future economy, the council estimated that her population in 1949 would be about 66,500,000. It also was assumed that zonal boundaries will be eliminated for economic purposes and that Germany will be treated as one economic unit.
The council assumed that a foreign market will exist for German exports, and that the label "made in Germany" will not prejudice buyers as it did after the first world war. Cuts will be made in the manufacture of machine tools and other heavy industries, but it is expected that "reasonable financial stability" will exist by 1949.
Germany's metal, chemicals, and machinery factories will be the main source of reparations. Her exports will consist largely of coal, potash, timber, textiles, leather goods, glass and ceramics.

ATOMIC FAREWELL

"Spotlight Bands" says an "atomic" farewell, Friday, to the unprecedented wartime road tour, which saw the nation's top dance bands visiting military and industrial installations all over the land, to boost morale with programs of peppy popular tunes. Three days later, on April 1, "Spotlight" starts its new series of "Sweet, Swing and Rhumba" sessions from New York and Hollywood. Jan Garber and his orchestra will play the last of the road-show broadcasts Friday at 9:30 p. m. (EST), from Roswell, New Mex., as a salute to the thousands of workers, engineers, scientists and military personnel who harnessed nuclear energy and developed the weapon that brought Japan to her knees. The program will originate at the Roswell Army Air Base, where a huge joint Army-Navy task force is busily making arrangements for "Operation Crossroads," the terrifying experiment in which atomic bombs in all their fury will be loosed on United States battleships off Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands in May. Following the Garber broadcast, "Spotlight Bands" will reconvene to civilian life with an all-star lineup, presenting Guy Lombardo, Xavier Cugat, and Harry James, on the Mutual network at 9:30 p. m. (EST) Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. During the 1,600,000 mile trek, 125 top-flight bands joined the "Spotlight" cavalcade which received tribute after tribute from high Army and Navy commanders, for an important wartime job "well done." "Spotlight's" atomic salute will see the Jan Garber orchestra being flown from Los Angeles to the Roswell Army Air Base, to pay tribute to those who "put the clincher" on the immeasurable effort expended by all American citizens, to insure victory in the greatest global conflict ever waged.

Pickaway Without Plan For Postwar Projects

County Is Among 35 in Ohio Which Did Not Report To Washington

Pickaway is among 35 of Ohio's 88 counties which have prepared no definite plans for postwar public works projects.

Several months ago the federal government sent, from Washington, questionnaires to each of Ohio's 88 counties and also to the state's principal cities and towns, asking the local officials to compile a list of proposed public works projects.

Pickaway Fails To Answer

At Washington the Federal Works Agency has just announced that a survey showed that 35 counties failed to offer postwar plans. The announcement said that the survey also disclosed that 116 Ohio cities and towns lacked plans for public projects during the post-war era.

Of the $30,000,000 set aside for public works projects throughout the nation, $1,349,832 was allocated to Ohio, the Washington statement said.

In Pickaway, as in many other counties, officials have shown hesitancy in proceedings with plans for postwar public works projects because federal officials have failed to indicate just what proportionate share of the costs Uncle Sam planned to pay.

Schools Rank High

Among projects already approved in Ohio, according to the announcement from Washington, two-thirds represent proposed improvements to schools and sanitation facilities.

Other approved projects include improvements to highways, roads, streets, bridges, viaducts, hospitals, public buildings, parks, and airport facilities.

EMBATTLED UNO HAS UNION ROW AT OWN DOOR

NEW YORK, March 28—The United Nations security council, whose function is to settle the disputes of world powers, may have to call William Green, AFL president, to settle a dispute between two unions at the Hunter College headquarters.

The dispute between two AFL unions, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage employees, involves jurisdiction over television cameramen.

The television cameramen are members of the IBEW. The news-reel cameramen belong to the IATSE.

The IATSE refused to let news-cameramen photograph the UNO proceedings unless a stand-in camera crew equal to the number employed in the television camera crew was hired.

UNO hired the extra cameramen and the dispute was referred to Benjamin Cohen, assistant secretary-general who will decide if Green should be called in to settle the issue.

ARMY UNCOVERS FORTUNES HELD BY JAP ENVOYS

YOKOHAMA, March 27—Eighth Army officials today confiscated thousands of dollars in American currency and valuables illegally possessed by 300 Japanese diplomats and their families returning from Europe.

It was estimated the Japanese diplomats and their families would have $5,000,000 worth of illegal possessions.

EDITORIAL HAILS STRIKE DECISION BY JUDGE ORR

Common Pleas Judge Stanley Orr of Cuyahoga County, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Orr, Kingston, and the late W. K. Orr, has received high commendation in Cleveland for his handling of an injunction appeal involving mass picketing in electrical workers' strikes at Cleveland.

In a recent editorial the Cleveland Press, commenting on Judge Orr's decision, said: "Of the judges of our city, Stanley Orr seems constantly to command great affection, along with respect, from all who know him."

Judge Orr's decision forbade mass picketing. He is a brother of Mrs. Elizabeth Bennett, Kingston, who recalled that at an early age Judge Orr showed inclinations toward becoming a jurist—even as a pupil in the Kingston school where he was always eager to make speeches. That gave him the nickname of "Squire" and started him on the road to achievement of his ambition.

Pickaway Without Plan For Postwar Projects

County Is Among 35 in Ohio Which Did Not Report To Washington

Pickaway is among 35 of Ohio's 88 counties which have prepared no definite plans for postwar public works projects.

Several months ago the federal government sent, from Washington, questionnaires to each of Ohio's 88 counties and also to the state's principal cities and towns, asking the local officials to compile a list of proposed public works projects.

Pickaway fails to answer. At Washington the Federal Works Agency has just announced that a survey showed that 35 counties failed to offer postwar plans. The announcement said that the survey also disclosed that 116 Ohio cities and towns lacked plans for public projects during the postwar era.

Of the $30,000,000 set aside for public works projects throughout the nation, $13,498,322 was allocated to Ohio, the Washington statement said.

In Pickaway, as in many other counties, officials have shown hesitancy in proceeding with plans for postwar public works projects because federal officials have failed to indicate just what proportionate share of the costs Uncle Sam planned to pay.

Schools Rank High. Among projects already approved in Ohio, according to the announcement from Washington, two-thirds represent proposed improvements to schools and sanitation facilities.
